THE PASTOR

This weekend, Jesus challenges us in the Gospel to use our talents wisely. God entrusts each one of us with resources according to our ability. Our resources include more than just our money, as in this parable. It includes all that we are and all that we have at our disposal: our time, talents, opportunities, and our finances. Take stock of what you have been given by God. What's in your hand? Your very life is a gift and an investment from God. Like the master in this parable, God believes in you and has confidence that you will manage his resources wisely. God is pleased when we use and invest our resources. What matters most is not what we have been given but what we do with it.

God is displeased when we play it safe and refuse to take risks. From this parable, we could say that God is a risk-taker! He gives us resources, and he wants us to make them grow. That requires overcoming the fear of failure. Think of the risks that Jesus took - challenging religious leaders, overthrowing deep-seated racial and gender prejudice, and entrusting his kingdom work to his often-fickle followers. He also called others to take risks too – including leaving all and following him. God wants us to confront our fears and insecurities. He calls us to step out of our comfort zone. This does not mean that we should be reckless with our lives, but following Jesus requires faith, and faith often means risk. Life is meant to be an adventure. God has given each one of us such amazing potential waiting to be unpacked. He calls us to step out of the boat.

When our life is over, our eternal destiny will be based on our faith in Jesus. Salvation is by grace, not through our good works. However, we will be held accountable for what we do with what we have been given by God. He has made an investment in our lives, and he expects a return on it. This is not a heaven or hell issue. It is a matter of rewards. This truth should provide good motivation to ensure that we make every effort to make our lives count for the short time we are here on earth.
